

“this is a good opportunity to remind Jane that you aren't able to monitor dot.com anymore”

The work entailed principally my determining the most appropriate KPMG persons to field the enquiries to – an activity I was particularly suited to carry out e.g. from Ceri Hughes during my so-called ‘performance appraisal’ on 09.10.07, lines 370-372 (I secretly recorded; recording under section 8.1 KPMG page):

“There are a lot of people who say they that they know a lot about our range of services, but they don't.

Because of your experience in FAS [1], and then working in RAS [2], you are one of the few people who has that overview of all the service lines”

(1) - FAS = Financial Advisory Services

(2) – RAS = Risk Advisory Services

Concurrently, it often entailed providing them with information to help them address the enquiries; and then ensuring that they were followed up promptly.

But, I liked dealing with the enquiries, so: ‘a good reason to have me taken off’!

(What Hughes should have done, as Bassett told me, and I reported in my 25.04.07-13h45 email, is “develop a business case”...to get me, a KPMG employee, ‘permission’ to access the KPMG websites...when it suited her).

Other examples PROVING that I was cut-off from accessing even KPMG sites can be seen in the printscreens of 26.10.07 and 21.11.07 - that returned the following message:

“WEBSENSE: Your organization's internet use policy restricts access to this page at this time”

I think that you can assume that KPMG's internet site is not a forbidden area.

Thanks. Followed the link, and the next one, and ended up in the forbidden area: kpmg.com. So, have not looked.
