

(NOTE: The following are extracts amounting to less than four percent of the original article) (1)

<http://news.independent.co.uk/uk/politics/article2076153.ece>

Blair questioned by police on day of 'burying bad news'

By Colin Brown and Andrew Grice in Brussels

The Independent - Published: 15 December 2006

Downing Street faced accusations of trying to "bury bad news" by using the release of the report on the death Diana, Princess of Wales, to overshadow a two-hour grilling of the Prime Minister by police as part of the "cash-for-honours" investigation.

...

The Department for Constitutional Affairs under Lord Falconer of Thoroton announced it was pressing ahead with plans to limit the Freedom of Information Act - curtailing rights to access and increasing fees to apply.

..

(1) Please NOTE that I have yet to obtain permission from The Independent to reproduce these extracts from its article. (Given events - as reported in My Diary and under the Police section - I prefer to not promote my intention to re-launch the site)

As I am doing this for non-commercial purposes, I hope that The Independent will not think me presumptuous to assume that I can settle my position with it post re-launching my site