Noelle, Thank you...I have just opened this e-mail...sometimes my computer sends valid messages to my junk mail box

[REDACTED] my associate and friend for 33 years...went to London last Friday and found legal papers stating my flat would be auctioned and the contents sold to highest bidder on March 11. [REDACTED] called a solicitor that I had previously interviewed and took the paper work to [REDACTED] at [REDACTED]. I first spoke with [REDACTED] of the same firm. It was indeed fortunate that [REDACTED] happened to go to London. I have not received a single piece of paper to this effect in the states and I think the flats would be literally GONE had [REDACTED] not happened to go over.

My best to you as always. This fight is sapping your strength.

I'm sorry to acknowledge it, but I have a more difficult situation going with my company here. I cannot fight on two fronts.
